WASHED ASHORE.

Each Swell Brings Evidence of the Damage Bene

BY THE HURRICANE ON THE NEW ENGLAND COAST.

No Doubt But that the Allentown Has Gone Down With All on Board—The Ocean Steamers Believed to Have Sought Sea Room When the Storm Began—Considerable Damage Along the Shore.

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—The damage from the storm along the coast is tremendous, and every swell of the ocean brings fresh evidence that the damage outside was awful. The extent of loss to life or floating property cannot be estimated.

At Cohasset and along by Sandy Cove splendid pieces of furniture marked "Allentown" are washed in by every wave. This means that the iron steamer of that name from Philadelphia has gone to pieces and gone down off the ledges, and it is presumed, from the nature of the coast, that all on board went with it.

Capt. Brown, of the North Scituate life saving station, has made a diligent inspection of the coast in search of bodies from the steamer, but has discovered none as yet.

He advances the opinion that the ship has founded either on Davis or southeast ledge, each of which lie about a mile southeast of Minots ledge. An attempt will be made to reach Minots for information concerning the wrecks.

Numbers of summer cottages and most of the beautiful drives have been washed away. The Atlanta house alone loses fully $5,000 by reason of damages to its carpets and ceilings.

The beach all along is strewn with wreckage. At Atlantic City the storm is over and the beach is full of wreckage of every description.

All of the incoming steamers report having been caught in the frightful hurricane.

The Ocean Steamers.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Only three of the dozen or more ocean steamers due here arrived in port Tuesday, and according to the statements made by their officers, if the others sought for sea room when the Sunday storm began, there is no cause for apprehension as to their safety. They simply put off the coast to make better weather and to avoid the possibilities of being driven ashore. There were no evidences of disaster reported, except that the steamer Chancellor, from the East Indies, reported that off Bernegar, she passed a large quantity of wreckage, including cabin furniture and fixtures. This may have been from some schooner or smaller vessel. There are several coastwise steamers overdue, but most of them probably put well out to sea, and their delay in arrivals is thus accounted for. The Chancellor shipped many heavy seas during the gale, and received some damage about the decks.

The Arizona, of the Guion line, which usually reaches New York on Sunday, arrived on Monday night at Sandy Hook. She met the storm on Sunday, but, with the exception of the high seas and the general toing about, which made things uncomfortable for all on board, there was no more than the usual experience of a sea voyage.

The Hamberg steamship Polynesia had an extremely unpleasant experience for twenty-four hours. The sea broke over the vessel fore and aft, and the whole ship was virtually under water most of the time, while her 250 steerage passengers were praying below the decks. She met with only slight damage, however.

The steamer Hans and Kurt, twenty-five days out from New Castle, was tossed about by the heavy seas like a barrel, but she met with only slight damages above the water line.

The American schooner Jonathan May, struck on the Jersey beach off Sandy Hook in striking, the vessel went on broadside and careened, taking several tons of sand and water over her bulwarks. The crew took the rigging to await daylight, while the captain busied himself burning flash lights to attract the attention of those on shore. These lights were discovered by a patrolman at midnight and he gave the alarm. In a very short time the life line was shot aboard and securely fastened. But as there was still a chance of saving the vessel the crew refused to leave her until daylight, when they were taken ashore in the lifeboat of the station. The vessel is high on the beach, but with favorable weather may be saved.

There is a cry of disaster along the whola coast, and it will probably increase as the wind goes down, for the loss will then be known.

The destruction of property on Coney Island will not be covered by $200,000. The concourse may be said to be a total wreck. The expensive concrete roadway lies in heaps of irregular fragments that show where the waves swallowed up $75,000. The pines are smashed of the Coney Island Gas company, and had it not been for the foresight of the superintendent in shutting off the gas before the gale, explosions would have added their terrors to those of the storm. The marine railroad officials have as yet done nothing beyond viewing the spot once occupied by their expensive station and breakwater. As no vestige even of the foundations remain their loss will probably foot up to $75,000.

Between Manhattan beach and Brighton the sea made a clean breach across the beach and has partially opened the old inlet. The Manhattan Beach hotel was not injured, but four of the large bulkheads that project into the ocean were knocked into worthless heaps of stone and timber.

A Heavy Surf.

MARSHFIELD, Mass., Nov. 29.—The surf here is very heavy. A large three-masted schooner with the mizzen mast standing was discovered at daylight. She was last seen anchored off the shoal, one and one-half miles southeast of Brant Rock, north of Howland's ledge. She was rolling heavily and much fear is felt for her safety.

Fears For a Government Steamer.

OTTAWA, Nov. 29.—It is feared that the new government steamer Stanley, intended for Prince Edward Island ferry service, was out in the recent storm. The vessel was to have sailed from Glasgow last week. The department has cabled there for information.

Another Ship Lost.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The great Atlantic storm spent its force Tuesday. A message was received stating that the Nacoochee, owned by the Ocean Steamship company, of Savannah, had gone ashore on the North Carolina coast near Cane Hatteras.

A Barkentine Foundered.

BLOCK ISLAND, R. I., Nov. 29.—An unknown barkentine has foundered off the southwest ledge. The crew landed in dories. The vessel is laden with paving stones from Portland to New York.

HARRISON'S SOUTHERN POLICY.

He Is Surprised at Imputations of Unfriendly Toward the South.

GREENVILLE, S. C., Nov. 29.—The Greenville Daily News prints a letter recently received by its editor from Gen. Harrison and published by his permission. It is a reply to a letter urging that the southern commercial interests would be relieved from an incubus caused by doubts and fears regarding the southern policy of the coming administration, if Gen. Harrison would make some general assurance of his purpose to follow a conservative course toward the south, and is as follows:

"INDIANAPOLIS, IND., Nov. 14, 1888.

To A. B. Williams, Esq., Greenville, S. C.

"MY DEAR SIR—Your letter of November 10 has been received. I am not ready to make any public utterances upon any public question. Every day I am solicited by special correspondents of the press to speak upon this subject or that, but I have invariably declined, and to your appeal for some expression upon the question that interests you, I must for the present make the same answer. I understand that you have yourself been satisfied with the expressions made by me in my public utterances to visiting delegations during the campaign.

"When the surprise and disappointment which some of our people have felt over the result has passed away, and they give more calm thought to the situation, I think they will be as much surprised as I am that they should in thought or speech impute to me unfriendliness toward the south. The policies in legislation advised by the Republican party, I believe, are wholesome for the whole country, and if those who in their hearts believe with us upon these questions would act with us some other questions that give you local concern would settle them selves. Very truly yours,

"BENJAMIN HARRISON."

THE WARREN-HAVLIN FIGHT.

The Well Known Feather-Weights Fight in Frisco—Warren Wins.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 29.—Jack Havlin and Tommy Warren, the feather weights, had a fight to a finish Tuesday night in the rooms of the California Athletic club, for a purse of $1,000. Over one thousand persons paid fancy prices to see the battle. It was a pretty one-sided fight all the way through, in favor of Warren. Havlin occasionally got in good work, but the severity of his training having reduced his weight from 132 to 118 pounds, told on him terribly. Warren got first blood and two knock downs in rapid succession in the fourth round.

Havlin rallied in the seventh round and again in the nineteenth round, and each time got in some savage work, but he was too badly used up to last.

The last few rounds were the most brutal ever seen in this city. It was evident to every one that Havlin had no possible chance of winning. In the twenty-first round he was knocked down twice, and after that he was scarcely able to strike a blow.

Warren was apparently almost as fresh as at the beginning of the fight, a swollen lip being the only mark on his face, while Havlin's lips and eyes were terribly swollen, and blood was pouring from his face and from the front part of his body. In the twenty-second round Havlin was knocked down once, and in the next round five times. In the twenty-fourth round he was hardly able to stand, and Warren knocked him down six times. He came forward gamely for the twenty-fifth, but was hardly on his feet before Warren sent him under the ropes. He again stood up only to be again knocked down. He was unable again to respond when time was called, and the fight was awarded to Warren. No man in the ring, however, ever displayed greater gameness than did Havlin.

SHERIDAN ON WAR.

His Opinion of It as Expressed in His Memoirs.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—It is always interesting to know what a man thinks of his own profession. Here is what Gen. Sheridan thought of war, as expressed in his memoirs, just published:

"I do not hold war to mean simply that lines of men shall engage each other in battle and material interests be ignored. This is but a dual, in which one combatant seeks the other's life; war means much more, and is far worse than this. Those who rest at home in peace and plenty see but little of the horrors attending such a duel, and even grow indifferent to them as the struggle goes on, contenting themselves with encouraging all who are abe-bodied to enlist in the cause, to fill up the shattered ranks as death thins them.

"It is another matter, however, when deprivation and suffering are brought to their own doors. Then the case appears much graver, for the loss of property weighs heavy with the most of mankind; heavier often than the sacrifice made on the field of battle. Death is popularly considered the maximum of punishment in war, but it is not; reduction to poverty brings prayers for peace more surely and more quickly than does the destruction of human life, as the selfishness of man has demonstrated in more than one great conflict."

"It is another matter, however, when deprivation and suffering are brought to their own doors. Death is popularly considered the maximum of punishment in war, but it is not; reduction to poverty brings prayers for peace more surely and more quickly than does the destruction of human life, as the selfishness of man has demonstrated in more than one great conflict."

Cyrus Miller, said to have disappeared from Bluffton, Ind., with over $5,000 overdrawn accounts, turns up smiling and solvent to prove that it was an overdrawn statement.

Puckerbrush, Ind., congregation suspended service and watched with breathless interest while David V. Thompson, his son and Frank Wilson engaged in a fist fight in the sanctuary.

Contributions to the "One Dollar Library Fund."

Owing to the demand for our space during the political contest recently ended many things of local interest and importance were necessarily crowded out of our columns, hence little, if any, notice has been made during the past six weeks of the work going on in behalf of the public library. Those engaged in this work have not been idle. The "Dollar" subscription sheets, of which there were about forty placed in the hands of different individuals in the city and county, are now being heard from.

We understand that all persons who have these subscription papers are being requested to report by the 25th of next month. The columns of the BULLETIN will be open for all lists of subscribers and the names of the individuals reporting them.

Below is the list reported by Miss Clara Russell. Let all soliciting strive to do as well:

THE city election at Frankfort will come off next Saturday. A bitter fight is on between the candidates for Mayor, and excitement runs high. Robert H.
Todd, a negro, will likely be elected as Councilman, as the colored registered vote in his ward is in the majority.

COLUMBUS HUGHES, of Cabin Creek, who is troubled with temporary fits of insanity, was lodged in jail last evening by Deputy Marshal Dawson and Mr.
William Karr. Hughes threatened to carve Mr. Dawson up when the latter went to arrest him, but was soon quieted.

TWENTY-FIVE years ago E. W. Halford, Mr. Harrison's private secretary, was working as a job printer, and gave up the position to become a reporter on the Indianapolis Journal. The first item he wrote was a ten line advertisement. This is encouraging to us newspaper fellows.

MR. BUSH HART, one of Uncle Sam's storekeepers, has announced that he will make the race for Jailer of Bourbon County. Evidently he is not expecting any favors from the incoming administration.
Mr. Hart was stationed at one of the distilleries in the West End a year or so ago.

JUDGE SAM SAVAGE has had eighteen residences built at Ashland since he became a resident of that city. His plan is to purchase a lot and erect a house thereon, and then sell it on long time, the purchaser paying him a certain amount each month until the house and lot are paid for.

ANOTHER one of the noted characters of Rowan County is no more, Hiram Pigman having died last Tuesday from injuries received by being run over by a C. & O. train, at Morehead. Pigman was the reputed slayer of Craig Tolliver. It is reported he was drunk when he met with the accident that resulted in his death.

THE Cincinnati, Portsmouth and Big Sandy Packet Company have asked the Augusta council to allow them to use the wharf privileges for the sum necessary to keep the grade in repair, estimated at probably $500 per year. The company pays the city now at the rate of about $1,000 per year. The petition will likely be granted.

MR. J. B. FAULKNER, of Flemingsburg,

ALFRED GRAYSON, the ex-convict who has figured in our courts frequently, was sent to the penitentiary from Louisville a month or so ago on charge of horse-stealing. A fellow giving his name as "J.
T. Jeffers" wrote to the Courier-Journal this week from Lexington, stating that Grayson is innocent of the charge.

THE friends of Mr. John McGrath will regret to learn of his sudden death, which occurred at Anthony, Kan., a few days ago, from disease of the heart. He was fifty-three years old. He came over from Ireland thirty years ago, and learned the blacksmith trade in this city.
Afterwards he moved to Flemingsburg, and from there to Anthony. He leaves nine children.

AT Owingsville, November 26, a large tobacco bran, belonging to Jacob Warner, was destroyed by fire. The barn contained over 12,000 pounds of first-class tobacco, which had been sold for winter delivery at ten cents per pound.
No insurance, either on building or contents. Mr. Warner also lost all his farming implements. The fire was of incendiary origin. Loss fully $3,000.

CARLISLE ANDERSON, a young man about fifteen or sixteen years of age, son of Marcus Anderson, who formerly lived on a farm in Kentucky opposite our was a bright and promising youth, and his early death excites great regret among the friends of the family.—Ripley Bee.

SCROFULOUS.

Such is the Condition of the Young German Emperor.

HIS DISEASE MAY CAUSE HIS DEATH WITHIN A YEAR.

His Affliction Almost Unbearable—The Commander of the Emin Bey Relief Expedition Not Yet Decided Upon—Jen Carney Wants to Fight Jack McAuliffe.

Foreign Notes.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The reports of the confinement of the emperor of Germany to his apartments with a severe cold have revived the stories prevalent here some time ago of the young monarch's scrofulous condition and the imminent of his succumbing to a disease similar to that which terminated the life of his father. From private dispatches received during the last few days as well as from correspondence giving what purported to be accurate information as to the actual condition of the health of Emperor William covering the last fortnight, it is gathered that the German throne is threatened with another abdication through the operation of the laws of nature within the next year, and it is asserted that the absolute facts cannot much longer be held from the public.

Almost immediately upon his accession to the throne Emperor William, never regarded as a robust man, although appearing in padded uniform as of fine physique and in excellent form, began a series of visits to his imperial and royal brethren the exactions of which would have impaired the powers of a much stronger man than he. Moreover it is stated that upon several occasions covered by the period of his journeys and stoppages at the various capitals visited the young emperor permitted himself to indulge inordinately in strong drink, a practice to which he was not addicted prior to his assumption of imperial power.

To this indulgence and its consequent effects are ascribed many of his lapses in filial duty toward his mother, which in a man in the ordinary walks of life, would have been characterized—and justly, too—as the acts of a man of conspicuously brutal instincts, and also much of his intemperance of speech with references to vital political questions.

That the emperor's constitutional ailments have been very much aggravated by over exertion and over indulgence there can be no doubt and the suggestion that he is now, or upon the verge of suffering from a complaint from which few of the Hohenzollerns of the later generations have been entirely free is received in England with "I told you so" air betokening, if not genuine satisfaction, at least an unshaken popular belief in the doctrine of retribution.

The Emperor's Affliction.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—A London special to the Times says:

There have been sundry reports in court circles here of late that Emperor William is suffering from an acute attack of scrofulous trouble, a swelling inside the ear, about which the doctors are much alarmed. It keeps him awake almost continually and drives him to constant occupation for relief.

His odd way of turning up at sunrise drills and his strange activity in rushing from one function to another all day are thus accounted for. On Sunday one of the people best informed in England, on inner Berlin news told me that he had become worse during the last few days, and Monday it was announced that owing to a cold he will remain indoors during the rest of the week. If the ear malady should take a serious turn there would be immense excitement all over Europe.

The African East Coast Expedition.

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—With reference to the Emin relief expedition, it is stated that Dr. Peters and Lieut. Wissman have arrived at an agreement, in accordance with which the latter will advance to the Great Lakes, where he will await Dr. Peters, but it is not yet decided which of the two will command the combined expedition.

Dr. Peters was entertained at a students' commissary. In a speech he said: "Those who thought us dead will be astonished to see how courageously we shall act in making the East Africa company a worthy standard-bearer of the National honor. With a colonial force of say 300 Germans and 500 natives, assisted by our men-of-war, we shall reconquer the coast. But we are not so presumptuous as to demand a land army from the empire."

Revolt on Turkish Transports.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 29.—A revolt on the part of 2,000 men employed on government transports, whose time has expired, has taken place. The mutineers raked the fire from under the boilers on the transports, in order to prevent their sailing until the arrears of their wages had been paid. The minister of war with great difficulty, raised money with which to pay the men, and the vessels have sailed. The sultan has ordered an inquiry to be made into the matter.

A Prospective Earl in Trouble.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Horace Walpole, heir to the earldom of Oxford, will shortly figure in the courts as defendant in a promising scandal. A German governess named Valery Wiedemann has sued him for breach of promise to marry and also for libel. The damages are placed at £10,000. The governess alleges that Walpole met her in Bulgaria, and after offering to marry her, betrayed her. He then discarded her and repudiated the paternity of her child.

Jen Carney's Bluff.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Jen Carney, the lightweight champion, has requested the Sporting Life to reply to the challenge of Jack McAuliffe. He does not intend, he says, to fight again in America, as he is assured that he will not receive fair play. He is ready, however, to fight McAuliffe in England or on the continent, for any sum of money, allowing his American adversary a reasonable amount for expenses.

He believes himself a prophet, but he is evidently a crank.

MRS. GENERAL SHERMAN DEAD.

She Dies At Her Home In New York City of Heart Trouble.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Mrs. Ellen Ewing Sherman, wife of William T. Sherman, died at 10 a.m. at her residence, No. 75 West Seventy-first street, in this city.

For nearly five years Mrs. Sherman has been suffering from heart trouble, and about three weeks ago her malady assumed a serious aspect.

Gen. Sherman was almost prostrated Tuesday evening. He and his wife have been married thirty-eight years, and grew up as children together in Lancaster, O., where Mrs. Sherman was born sixty-four years ago. Her father was the celebrated Tom Ewing, senator, representative and cabinet officer, and the mother was a Miss Boyle, and it is from her that Mrs. Sherman inherits her rigid Catholic faith for which she has become noted.

IGHTS OF LABOR.

Important Matters Considered in Their Closing Session.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 29.—Before adjourning the general assembly Knights of Labor sat down on a motion to amend their constitution to allowing the selling of liquor at Knights of Labor entertainments. Atlanta, New Orleans and Albany received the highest number of votes as next place of meeting, and the executive board will select which place it prefers.

A committee was appointed to investigate the shooting of knights in Louisiana for striking. The assembly indorsed the Blair educational bill, determined to establish junior locals and recommend the committee to investigate the general offices at Philadelphia, Powderly to name the committee. He appointed Messrs. McGee, Beaton and Jameson.

The Mississippi's True Source.

SAU CENTER, Minn., Nov. 29.—The true source of the Mississippi river has at last been discovered, by parties living at this place. It is two small lakes, one of which they named Lake Josephine. These lakes are fed by many small creeks, and their waters are emptied into Lake Glazier, which lake was discovered by Capt. William Glazier, who claimed it to be the source of the Father of Waters.

A Murder Epidemic in Minnesota.

Ordered to Leave.

COLUMBUS, Ind., Nov. 29.—Mrs. Doran, who was just acquitted in the circuit court of murdering her husband by pouring carbolic acid down his throat in July last, returned here Tuesday from Indianapolis, and was ordered to leave this city and stay away or insanity proceedings would be filed against her, she having been acquitted on this dodge. She informed the authorities that she was as sane as they, or the court and jury that tried her. Considerable indignation is felt over her conduct.

Taking Interest in the Centennial.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Secretary Anderson has received a letter from Governor Biggs, of Delaware, saying he will be present at the meeting of the centennial and exposition National board on December 1; also a letter from the Italian chamber of commerce, of New York, saying that Alexander Ordini, one of their directors, will represent the chamber on that occasion.

School Building Burned.

DANVILLE, Ill., Nov. 29.—The public school building in the village of Rossville, this county, was destroyed by fire Monday morning. Loss about $20,000; insurance, $1,000. It is supposed the fire originated from the steam-heating apparatus.

TYPICAL DIABOLOS.

LUXURIOUS BRIGANDS WHO MAKE EUROPE THEIR CAMPING GROUNDS.

Picturesque Rogues of Eastern Roumelia. Luxurious Rascals Who Are Not Content with Common Things—The Real "Fra Diavolo"—Scribe's Delusive Creation.

Brigandage—which may happily be said to be all but defunct in Spain and the Italian peninsula, which is only heard of now and again in feebly spasmodic outbursts in Sicily, which has lost much of its former virulence in the kingdom of Hellene proper, and which, thanks to railways and the maintenance of something approaching a stable government, fading even out of Mexico—seems, by all accounts, to be flourishing in the fullest luxuriance in Eastern Roumelia. The energy and impudence of the gang of bandits who recently captured two Austrian subjects, MM. Landier and Binder, at Belova, and demanded no less a sum than 1,300 Turkish pounds for their ransom, are almost of a nature to vie with the late M. Edmund About's delightfully picturesque but slightly imaginative narrative of the achievements of the Greek "Klept" Hadji Stavros, "King of the Mountains."

It cannot be denied that there is a slight touch of humor in the proceedings of these ruffianly outlaws, and that they have contrived to cast a new light on the domestic economy of brigand life. There has been hitherto a tolerably general consensus among travelers that the modern brigand is, as a rule, a deplorable ragamuffin, usually a never do well peasant or an insolent horse couper, who is in league with the drunk shop keeper and sometimes with the priest of the village round about which he prowls. His innermost garment is more frequently a goat skin than a shirt of textile fabric; he rarely washes; his ideas touching combs are indistinct and he never heard of a tooth brush.

As for his diet, it is one in which salt fish and sausages largely predominate over butcher's meat, and rancid oil over both, and as regards stimulants, he will drink as much as he can get of the commonest red wine, the most fiery corn brandy and the most malodorous mastic or "raki." Of course, he smokes, but usually his tobacco has been the vilest Russian "maborka" and his pipe a rude chibouck of cherry wood. The Belova brigands seem, however, to have souls far above such primitive garb and such simple viands as we have glanced at.

PERFECT SYBARITES.

The rogues are perfect sybarites, and, in a letter addressed to a rich merchant of Tartar-Bazardjik, they demanded that there should be forthwith sent to them six Martini rifles of the pattern furnished to the Eastern Roumelian gendarmeries, together with a large supply of ball cartridge, thirty-five pairs of shoes, as many shirts, ornamented with the finest Russian embroidery, thirty-five pairs of stockings of the best quality, thirty-five cakes of scented soap, an equal quantity of ivory combs, three dozen less one of ivory cigarette holders, a large quantity of tobacco and cigarettes, and a neatly assorted stock of cognac, vermouth, bitters, cheese and other creature comforts. It is only to be wondered that at these dandy brigands did not add a few dozen boxes of sardines, Paris kid gloves, hand mirrors, birthday cards and flasks of eau de Cologne to their list. Their attire of roses they probably prepare for themselves, the odoriferous manufacture being indigenous to the region they adorn with their presence.

About the only tenable hypothesis that can be formed to account for the elegant luxury in which the Bulgarian brigands have taken to living may be that they have been reading a translation of the libretto of Scribe's "Fra Diavolo," and that they have resolved to "live up to it."

The real "Fra Diavolo," whose name was Michele Pozza, was the most repulsive of highway robbers. He had been a stocking knitter in a small way of business in the kingdom of Naples, and, going bankrupt, took naturally to the road. He became the scourge and terror of the two Calabrias, and a price was set on his head, but when in 1793 Cardinal Ruffo undertook to force the French to evacuate the Neapolitan territory he paraded "Fra Diavolo," and even gave him a commission as lieutenant colonel of volunteers.

EXECUTED AT LAST.

For eight years this inconceivable blackguard waged guerrilla warfare on the Gallic invaders, robbing and murdering his own countrymen when there were no foreigners to fight, but in 1806 he was captured, shot and gibbeted, the officer who ordered his execution being, oddly enough, a gallant French general, the father of the great master of the romantic school in France—Victor Hugo. There was in reality nothing more romantic about Fra Diavolo than there was about our Anglo-French highwayman, Claude Duval, who was simply an absconding profligate footman of the Duchess of Portsmouth, but in the early days of French romanticism every incident and every personage that could be perverted to picturesque use were eagerly seized upon by the novelists and playwrights. They turned to Spain, and especially Italy; and, while Victor Hugo fabricated a wholly unhistorical Lucrezia Borgia as the hero of a tragedy, Alexander Dumas manufactured an equally unveracious Fra Diavolo as the hero of a novel.

The ready witted Scribe at once availed himself of the latter amusing but delusive creation, and with the collaboration of the composer, Aubert, he produced the always charming comic opera of "Fra Diavolo." There can be but little doubt that, while the lyric art benefited largely by the popularity of Aubert's sparkling and harmonious numbers, an appreciable amount of social harm was done by the highly picturesque and histrionic presentation given by Scribe of the sham "Fra Diavolo" and his gang of murderous desperadoes. Society began to believe in the existence of a marauder elegantly and expensively attired in plum colored velvet, with gilt sugar loaf buttons to his jacket, his lower limbs swathed with criss-cross thongs, and wearing a conical hat profusely ornamented with ribbons.

This ideal brigand was scrupulously polite to ladies, and would bow over and reverently salute the taper fingers from which he gently removed the diamond rings, and only under extreme pressure of necessity would this orthodox bandit, who was usually a devout son of the church, rob a bishop.—New York Graphic.
